LANG6452

Course Outline

Description:

Building on Part I, participants will continue with topics like pronunciation, basic vocabulary and grammar, key verbs and useful cultural information. Take advantage of the smaller class and slower pace of this noon-hour class.

In this course, the student will continue gaining speech skills, as well as having a deeper approach to Spanish grammar and verb conjugation. Through different activities, the student will complete the basic course of Spanish and will be prepared for a more challenging course beyond the basics of this exiting language. This course also offers a deeper approach to the Hispanic and Latin American culture, through readings of short articles and stories as well as through songs and jokes.

It is important to review the material assigned by the instructor and study new words and expressions, as well as grammar structures after each class. In this way, the student will be enhancing his or her skills of communication in Spanish, being able to use recently learned content in the following session. The topics are flexible and depend on the interest of the group and learning speed. Therefore the lectures may change as the course progresses. The order of lectures may differ that of the textbook, in order to offer more consistent learning strategies that combine both the textbook, presentations, audiovisual files, handouts and diverse activities in class.

Course Goals:

To complete the building of a strong foundation of Spanish that enables the student to communicate in daily situations, and to help him/her to understand readings. Learning the basics of grammar and the proper use of genders and articles in Spanish. Prepare students for a deeper understanding of the language in "Spanish, beyond the basics".
